

December 9, 2007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Media contact:
Dan Englander
+1 602 320 5629
dan@team.shoebboxed.com

Shoebboxed Mail-In set to revolutionize receipt organization

DURHAM, N.C. — Shoebboxed, the leading online service for organizing receipts, has launched a new program allowing people to mail in receipts they would like to have organized. With the new service, called Shoebboxed Mail-In, Shoebboxed's expert organizational staff will scan in receipts and enter data into users' accounts—all for free. With this groundbreaking program, the hassle of scanning in receipts is finally a thing of the past.

The initial response to the program's launch was extremely positive. "We were overwhelmed by the number of people calling and e-mailing us about how we were going to change their lives with Shoebboxed Mail-In," said Taylor Mingos, Shoebboxed's founder and CEO. "It's all very exciting, and we are proud to be offering a service that so many people need."

Mail-In subscribers receive an envelope each month from Shoebboxed with a separate prepaid envelope to return. They then fill the prepaid envelope with as many receipts as they can and mail it back. Team members scan in all the receipts and upload all relevant information into the user's account. All of the original receipts are then sent back to the subscriber along with another prepaid envelope for the next month's receipts. Shoebboxed then mails all the original receipts back to the user with another prepaid envelope for the next month.

Mingos founded Shoebboxed in January 2007 to eliminate the hassle of keeping receipts organized. The site allows users to organize e-mail receipts and to scan in their own in a secure and easy-to-use platform. It also reduces the quantity of unwanted e-mails reaching users' personal inboxes and gives users the option to join a global community of shoppers by sharing some of the purchases they store in their accounts.